DAILY EXPRESS ICE BLANKET

Saves 1/2
Your Ice Bills.

To its many subscribers, old and new, the Daily Express is offering a most unique premium that should at once become popular in every home in Chickasha where there is a refrigerator or ice box. The blanket is made of vegetable parchment, is thoroughly sanitary, and its value lies in the fact that it excludes heat from the outside and retains the cold air beneath. Just place the blanket loose over exposed side of ice, top or front, tucking the edges in. It will keep the outside warm air from coming in contact with the ice and save one half, and will not decrease refrigeration. The blanket is not porous so it will not become musty or strong smelling, won't dissolve or go to pieces when wet, so you need have no fear of clogging the drain pipe. Don't use any more porous, unsanitary cloths, burlap sacks or newspapers on your ice.

The only consideration necessary to secure one of these blankets, is to pay one month's subscription in advance to the Daily Express—forty cents—and our collector, or collectors, and our one or the blankets may be obtained on the same terms at the Daily Express office.

If you do not desire to advance your subscription one month, the ice blanket may be bought at this office. Price 10 cents.

Trend of Trading Yesterday.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Improved weather both in the winter crop belt and in the spring wheat states, had a bearish effect today on the wheat market here. Reports as to the chances of averting serious black rust damage were much more hopeful than was the case yesterday and recent buyers showed a decided tendency to take profits. Opening prices, which ranged from a shade to 7-8 lower were followed by a material setback in values all around.

BIRDS FRIGHTENED BY WAR

Those of Belgium Have Largely Disappeared From Their Accustomed Nesting Places.

Where are the birds of Belgium? Everyone who has known the Belgium of the past will ask himself this question in thinking of some of the admirable Flemish restaurants he has visited. For the Belgians were a nation of bird eaters, and in this little country as in Italy every variety of bird was pressed into service.

No one who has been through the forests of the Ardennes will fail to recall how strangely silent they were, how lacking in bird songs, for the wholesale slaughter of the birds went on until one wondered where the little song birds appearing on their pieces of fried bread came from. Now with the noise of battle over all the land, the constant cannonading has frightened away even the boldest of the native birds.

Grives were the aristocrats of Belgian game birds, and one of the most delectable dishes known to the Belgian cuisine was grives a la Namuroise. Thousands of grives were served daily in autumn in restaurants, and as no Belgian dinner is considered complete without a bird of some sort, just where so many came from always remained a mystery. A grive is a thrush, but blackbirds and starlings, so nearly of the same size, often masqueraded in the Belgian casseroles as thrushes.

Then beside grives there were woodcock and snipe and the because a la Champagne to be had in restaurants in Brussels and Antwerp was a delicious morsel indeed. At Mons and at Liege and Charleroi every year there was a great fete called a woodcock feast, at which the succulent birds were cooked in a variety of ways. A little wax candle was placed beside the plate of each diner, and in its flame he would frizzle the tiny head of the woodcock and eat its brains, which were considered a great delicacy.

The partridges of Louvain were famous for their plumpness and delicious flavor, perhaps because of the fact that they fed upon the best root cultivated there by the hundreds of acres for the great beet sugar factories. Blackcock is served too as coq de bruyere.

Woodcock in season used to be the specialty of the Follie Dechiree, a famous little restaurant in Brussels. "Gangas du Japon," often served in the finer restaurants in Brussels, was simply Japanese partridge. These birds often migrated to northern Africa in winter and made their way thence to Spain, where they were caught in large numbers and finally taken to Belgium, where they were bred. They had flesh of fine flavor and plumpness.

Fluctuation in Currant Trade.

Holland's tulip craze recalls the rush which developed in Greece something like thirty-five years ago, when landowners staked their all on the future of currants. After the vineyards of France had been ravaged by phylloxera, there sprang up a great demand from that country for Greek currants to be used in wine-making, and prices soared to heights never before known in the currant trade. Under this stimulus Greek landowners all through the currant-producing provinces uprooted their olive groves and planted the lands to currants, until within a few years the acreage had far more than doubled. Then France, having found means to combat the phylloxera, placed upon currants a prohibitive import duty, thereby permanently shutting off from Greek currant growers the market whose demands had stimulated them to increased production. Immediate supply overtopped demand in the world's currant market—this district, which supplies the world's currants, was producing 30 per cent more fruit than it could dispose of. Prices fell precipitately, and for decades the currant trade was in a bad condition.

Admiral Von Tirpitz.

Admiral von Tirpitz, at the head of the German navy, and whose name has figured prominently in the news of the day since the sinking of the Lusitania, started Germany on the path of navalism in 1898. He has little use for society and has never regarded social graces as "desirable attributes of men who expect to fight the Kaiser's battles on sea." His rise has been rapid. At twenty he was a lieutenant, and twenty years after entering the navy he was flying the pennant of a rear admiral. He first attracted the attention of the Kaiser by reorganizing, or rather by creating, the German torpedo fleet. He was also instrumental in establishing the German outpost of Kiaochow, a colony that has been directly under his jurisdiction as minister of marine.

Prominent Russian Statesman.
General Sukhomlinoff, minister of war for Russia, unlike most of his predecessors, is a Slav and a Russian Nationalist, and was formerly military governor of Kiev. His work, until summoned to assume the task of reorganizing the military forces of Russia as minister of war, was entirely within the strategic problems of Russia's western frontiers. He took part neither in the Chinese nor Japanese wars, nor in any of the Asiatic wars, under the celebrated General Dragomiroff, whose favorite lieutenant he was, and whom he succeeded in the command of the southwestern frontier. By profession he is a cavalryman, and is generally regarded as the most remarkable cavalry leader in Europe.
